Quintessentially Madison!

Weekend filled with events defining city...

The Cornerstone Society's Trio Tour drew an estimated 250 people Saturday to at least one of three historic properties now being renovated. The former Tower Manufacturing tack factory (above) is being turned into loft apartments for senior citizens. The structure on West Second Street, which was built in 1884, has been vacant since 2007. The Eagle Cotton Mill (below) was built in 1884 at Vaughn Drive and St. Michael's Avenue, and has had a variety of industrial uses. Plans are for that building to become a boutique hotel. The third structure was the former Elks Lodge on West Street, which was gutted by fire in 2006. Learn more on Page A6. (Courier staff photo by Connor Jacobs)

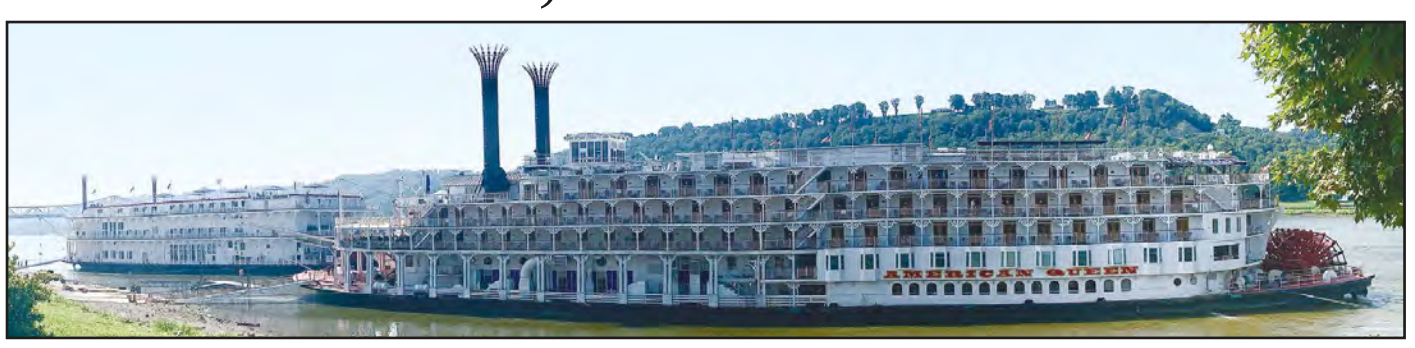
Riverboats, statues and honors



What would Madison be without riverboats? Sunday was a perfect example when the American Queen and the American Duchess paddlewheel boats were both moored for the day. Turn to Page A6 for a look at a sweet contest that sprouted from the visit. (Courier staff photo by Trenton Scroggins)

Indiana deaths up from child abuse, neglect

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — A report released Friday from the Indiana Department of Child Services says child neglect and abuse deaths increased during fiscal year 2017 — 65 deaths directly from abuse or neglect. That's up from 59 child deaths in fiscal year 2016. The report found that 44 were due to neglect and 21 were caused by abuse. Forty-five of the 65 fatalities involved children 3 years old or younger. It illustrates a national trend that very young children are at the highest risk of abuse or neglect. The report found that the most common neglect-related child deaths were related to kids being left unattended near water or a caregiver's failure to provide safe sleeping arrangements.

Man faces 20 felony charges after 8 fires

INDIANAPOLIS — A 40-year-old man faces 20 felony charges of arson after being accused in a string of fires in Indianapolis dating back to 2014. David Bradshaw is accused of setting at least eight fires with an estimated of damage of over $1 million. The latest occurred earlier this month when fires were started on the porches of three Indianapolis homes. Bradshaw is being held in Marion County Jail. A jury trial is scheduled for September. Court documents did not indicate whether Bradshaw has an attorney. A listed phone number could not be located for him on Sunday. Indianapolis police say in a statement that Bradshaw was found through a collaboration of Indianapolis police and fire investigators, as well as the U.S. Marshals service.

Schools plan shifting students to city buses

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis Public Schools district is looking to shift high school students away from traditional school buses to the city's bus system. The district and the IndyGo transit system will offer city bus passes to about 5,000 students in grades 9-12 as a two-year pilot project starts in August. WFYI-FM reports the passes will let the students travel by regular city bus routes to and from school but also use it year-round for traveling to jobs or extracurricular activities. District official Dennis Tackitt says the district spends more than $12 million a year on high school transportation. That could be cut to about $500,000 annually, or $100 per student, in payments to IndyGo. Tackitt says the plan is to end the traditional high school bus service by fall 2021.

Girl, 8, dies after boat's propeller strikes her

BLOOMINGTON — State conservation officers say an 8-year-old girl has died after being struck by a boat's propeller in Monroe Lake. The Department of Natural Resources' law enforcement division says the girl was pronounced dead Sunday evening at a Bloomington hospital. Conservation officers say the girl was boating with her father and friends on the lake southeast of Bloomington when she was fatally injured. She was wearing a life jacket when she was struck by the propeller. The accident remains under investigation and authorities say additional details will be released as they become available.

1 of 2 judges shot set for return to bench

JEFFERSONVILLE — A judge who was shot this spring following a fight in downtown Indianapolis is set to return to the bench. Clark County Circuit Court Judge Bradley Jacobs is expected back at work Monday. His return to judicial duties will come nearly three months after he and fellow Clark County Judge Drew Adams were shot outside a fast-food restaurant during a fight with two men. The judges were in Indianapolis for a judicial conference. Adams and those two men are charged in the altercation. The News and Tribune reports that Adams, who faces battery charges for his role in the fight, has been suspended from the bench with pay until further notice.

Several tombstones knocked over

JEFFERSONVILLE — At least 40 tombstones were knocked over at a cemetery, prompting people to rush out to check on their loved ones' graves. The (Louisville) Courier-Journal reports that word spread Sunday about the vandalism at the combined St. Anthony and Eastern cemetery in Jeffersonville, and at least a dozen people went there to check gravesites. Some gravestones were broken, and most of the damage was toward the center of the cemetery just north of Louisville, Kentucky, where some graves date to the 1800s. Patty Burger, of Jeffersonville, cried after she found that her parents' tombstone, as well as one for her aunt and uncle, had been knocked over. She asked: What "sick human being" would do such a thing? The vandalism was reported to police.

STATE BRIEFS

State buying houses for US 31 upgrades

TIPTON — The state highway department has been buying houses along U.S. 31 in Tipton County ahead of plans for making it into a limited-access highway. Property records show the agency has bought 12 properties totaling more than 17 acres over the past year between Indiana 28 and the Tipton-Howard county line. Highway department spokeswoman Mallory Duncan tells The Kokomo Tribune that properties are being purchased as they go up for sale. She says the purchases will reduce the number of vehicles turning onto U.S. 31 from driveways. State officials are planning to install new interchanges at some current intersections where they are stoplights between South Bend and the northern suburbs of Indianapolis. Duncan says the department doesn't have a timeline for the projects.

Schools raise pay, offer incentives for drivers

ELKHART — Some school districts are raising pay to keep and attract bus drivers. Doug Thorne, chief of staff at Elkhart Community Schools, says there's a significant shortage of people in the U.S. who have a commercial driver's license. The Elkhart Truth reports that a new driver will get $19.99 per hour after 55 days in Elkhart. The top rate is $22.47 per hour. There's also a $250 bonus per semester under certain conditions. Michelle Ivey says she's grateful for the raise but would like an increase in field trip pay, which is $13.25 per hour. In Goshen, field trip pay is going up to $15 per hour. Bus drivers who are accident-free will get a Goshen safety jacket. The Concord district has set pay at $23 per hour for the most experienced drivers.

Family celebrates dog's return after 6 months

EAST CHICAGO — A family is celebrating their dog's return, nearly six months after the beloved pet was stolen from their yard. Josephine Lopez filed a police report but had little hope of seeing Zino, a Maltese mix, after the dog was taken from her East Chicago yard in February. But The (Northwest Indiana) Times reports that Zino was recently found on the streets of St. Cloud, Minnesota, some 500 miles away. Zino's microchip provided authorities with the information needed to contact Lopez. A dog rescue group helped fly Zino home. The canine was reunited Thursday with Lopez and her family at Chicago's Midway International Airport. Lopez says they're elated that "our fur baby made it through" to return home.

Authorities recover man's body from water

CHESTERTON — Authorities say a 35-year-old man's body has been recovered from Lake Michigan at Indiana Dunes State Park. The Indiana Department of Natural Resources says a park lifeguard noticed a man struggling Saturday evening near the edge of the designated swimming area. The man slipped under the surface of the water as the lifeguard approached. The man did not resurface. Several law enforcement agencies responded. At 8 p.m. a diver with the Chesterton Fire Department located the man's body in 10 feet of water. Indiana Conservation Officers and the Porter County Coroner's Office are working to determine the cause of death.

Construction worker fatally struck

SYRACUSE — Authorities say a worker was fatally struck by a vehicle while directing traffic at a construction site. The Kosciusko County Sheriff's Department says the construction flagger was hit Friday afternoon at the site on Indiana 13 just south of Syracuse. The worker killed was identified as Ben Fisher of Plymouth. Investigators say the construction crew had finished for the day and was picking up materials when Fisher was hit about 30 miles southeast of South Bend. Additional information on the circumstances of the crash wasn't immediately released.

Kentucky

State launching teacher recruitment campaign

FRANKFORT — Education officials say a growing teacher shortage has become critical and they are launching a recruitment campaign. Education Commissioner Wayne Lewis says recruitment efforts could include using programs like Teach for America, working with universities on alternative certification routes and hiring based on work experience. Department of Education spokeswoman Jessica Fletcher says open teaching positions climbed from 6,200 in 2014-15 to 8,800 in 2016-17. The department says there were 5,000 openings earlier this year. News outlets report several issues are mentioned as possible reasons for the shortage, including pensions, politics, pay and the pursuit of higher test scores. Officials say the shortage is caused by teachers leaving the field and fewer college students pursuing an education degree.

Democratic Party office vandalized with paint

LOUISVILLE — A headquarters for the Democratic Party in Kentucky has been vandalized, with phrases including "Witch Hunt" and "Treason Dem" scrawled across its facade in white paint.

Justice Department to restart executions in Terre Haute

By MARK FITTON
(Terre Haute) Tribune-Star

After a nearly two-decade halt, the U.S. government is resuming executions of federal inmates convicted in federal capital cases and has scheduled five such executions, three of them in December.

The federal death row is in the U.S. Penitentiary Terre Haute, and executions are conducted there.

The Justice Department made the announcement, saying U.S. Attorney General William Barr had ordered a change to the federal execution protocol and instructing the acting director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons to schedule the executions of five death-row prisoners convicted of murdering either children or elderly people.

The Justice Department said the acting director of the Bureau of Prisons, Hugh Hurwitz, has scheduled the executions.

• Dec. 9 — Daniel Lewis Lee: A member of a white supremacist group, Lee murdered a family of three, including an eight-year-old girl. On May 4, 1999, a jury in the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Arkansas found Lee guilty of offenses including three counts of murder in aid of racketeering, and he was sentenced to death.

• Dec. 11 — Lezmond Mitchell: He stabbed to death a 63-year-old grandmother in the presence of her 9-year-old granddaughter, then murdered the granddaughter. On May 8, 2003, a jury in the U.S. District Court for the District of Arizona found Mitchell guilty of numerous offenses, including first degree murder, felony murder, and carjacking resulting in murder, and he was sentenced to death.

• Dec. 13 — Wesley Ira Purkey: He raped and murdered and dismembered a 16-year-old girl. On Nov. 5, 2003, a jury in the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Missouri found Purkey guilty of kidnapping a child resulting in the child's death, and he was sentenced to death.

• Jan. 13, 2020 — Alfred Bourgeois: He tortured, sexually molested and beat to death his 2-year-old daughter. On March 16, 2004, a jury in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Texas found Bourgeois guilty of multiple offenses, including murder, and he was sentenced to death.

• Jan. 15, 2020 — Dustin Lee Honken: He shot and killed five people, including two girls ages 10 and 6. On Oct. 14, 2004, a jury in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Iowa found Honken guilty of numerous offenses, including five counts of murder during the course of a continuing criminal enterprise, and he was sentenced to death.

Each of these inmates has exhausted their appellate and post-conviction remedies, and each currently has no legal impediments preventing execution, the government said. Additional executions will be scheduled, it added.

The Federal Execution Protocol Addendum authorized by Attorney General Barr mirrors protocols used by several states including Georgia, Missouri, and Texas, the government said.

It replaces the three-drug procedure previously used in federal executions with a single drug, pentobarbital.

Since 2010, 14 states have used pentobarbital in more than 200 executions, and federal courts, including the Supreme Court, have repeatedly upheld the use of pentobarbital in executions as consistent with the Eighth Amendment, according to the Justice Deparment.

The Courier Journal reports the vandalism was reported to Louisville Metro police on Sunday morning. The phrases apparently painted with a roller also included "Racist AOC," an apparent reference to Democratic U.S. Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez. A Louisville Democratic Party statement Sunday calls the "hate filled graffiti" a symptom of the polarized political environment. It's unclear exactly when the building was defaced. No arrests were reported by early Monday.

Michigan man guilty in veteran's overdose

LEXINGTON — Federal prosecutors say a Michigan man has been convicted of distributing fentanyl-laced drugs that caused the death of an Army veteran in Kentucky. The Lexington Herald-Leader reports that the U.S. attorney's office said 43-year-old Shannon D. Hixon was convicted by a jury Thursday on charges of distributing the dangerous opioid fentanyl. Prosecutors say Hixon, of Detroit, supplied two people in Lexington with thousands of oxycodone tablets. Prosecutors say the pills were then taken to Morehead and Salyersville and sold to drug dealers and users. A news release says Hixon also supplied heroin and fentanyl to people in Lexington. Prosecutors say an Army veteran identified only as K.F. overdosed as a result of Hixon's drug distribution. Hixon faces 20 years to life in prison at sentencing in November.

Soldiers return to Fort Knox after 9 months

FORT KNOX — Dozens of Fort Knox soldiers who have been deployed to Afghanistan for nine months are returning to the Kentucky post. Fort Knox says about 150 soldiers from the 19th Engineer Battalion's 42nd Clearance Company are being welcomed home Monday. The soldiers conducted route clearance operations throughout southern Afghanistan during the deployment. The unit cleared nearly 7,000 miles of road to support NATO, Army, Marine and Romanian units conducting operations there. The post said the soldiers cleared over 400 possible improvised explosive devices, cleared eight sites from which rockets were fired and conducted over 200 quick reaction force missions.

Pickup truck hits home, woman in room killed

MARION — Police say a woman sitting in her living room was killed when a pickup truck struck her home. State Police in Madisonville said in a news release that 72-year-old Mary C. Bass of Marion was pronounced dead after the crash Saturday night. The statement says a preliminary investigation shows a pickup truck driven by 43-year-old Christopher Hill of Marion failed to stop at an intersection, drove across a lawn and into the home. The crash remains under investigation. Marion is about 180 miles (290 kilometers) southeast of St. Louis, Missouri.

Shooting leaves 1 dead, 2 injured; teen charged

HENDERSON — Police say a teenager has been arrested in a shooting at a party that left an Indiana teen dead and two others wounded. News outlets report the shooting occurred early Saturday at a banquet hall in Henderson. Henderson police said in a news release more than 100 people were attending the party when a fight broke out in a nearby street. The statement says 18-year-old Jaiwaun Latrell Wadlington of Evansville, Indiana, was found unresponsive and was pronounced dead at the scene. Another person who was shot was in critical condition at a hospital while a third individual was treated and released. Police arrested 18-year-old Japaris J. Baker of Henderson. Baker was held in the Henderson County Jail without bond, charged with first-degree assault and second-degree assault. Police say the shooting of Wadlington remains under investigation.

Child poured boiling water on friend as prank

MANCHESTER — Authorities say they're filing charges against the mother of a child accused of pouring boiling water on an 11-year-old boy as a prank. WYMT-TV reports Billy Oliver says a friend poured scalding water over him Tuesday while he was sleeping as part of the viral "Hot Water Challenge." Photos show Oliver at a hospital's burn unit with second- and third-degree burns. The friend's mother, 42-year-old Angela Guth of Manchester, is accused of not seeking medical help for Oliver. She has been arrested. Clay County Attorney Joe White says Guth is facing criminal abuse and endangerment charges. Clay County Sherriff's spokesman Clifton Jones confirmed to the Lexington Herald-Leader the office is filing charges. The "Hot Water Challenge" involves people drinking or pouring pour boiling water on themselves or someone else.

Making history fit into spaces for modern-day living

By PEGGY VLEREBOME
Special to the Courier

Seven upscale apartments are being built inside the shell of the former Elks Lodge at 524 West Street, where an arson fire gutted the 1904 building in August 2006. The apartments will have elements that remain from the lodge. Floor joists that could not be used for that purpose cover the interior staircases and at least one apartment wall.

Places to stay, whether for a night or for years, take many forms. In downtown Madison, three very different places to stay are taking shape that could not be less alike, but they share the common thread of being inside old buildings.

The three were open to the public for three hours Saturday for the Cornerstone Society's Trio Tour. The society, a historic preservation group affiliated with Indiana Landmarks, estimated that 250 people visited at least one of the three.

The biggest draw appeared to be the former Tower Manufacturing tack factory, 1001-1021 West Second Street, where 50 affordable loft apartments for senior citizens are being built inside two large brick buildings. Built in 1884, the site has been vacant since 2007.

A striking feature of the easternmost building at Cragmont and West Second streets are large arches on the ground floor. Every apartment will have an arch in its living room or a bedroom, said one of the tour guides, Jim Cox, who is the Riverside Loft Apartments project manager for Denton Floyd Real Estate Group, the developer. The development will include exposed brick walls and exposed wooden factory ceilings, he said.

Showers in the units can be made wheelchair-accessible easily, he said.

Completion is expected in April 2020, Cox said.

At the other end of the financial spectrum, seven upscale apartments are being built inside the shell of the former Elks Lodge at 524 West Street, where an arson fire gutted the 1904 building in August 2006.

The apartments will have elements that remain from the lodge. Floor joists that could not be used for that purpose cover the interior staircases and at least one apartment wall. The original ironwork on the entry staircase remains, and similar ironwork will be made for other stairs, said one of the tour guides, Brian Martin, who is the contractor for the project.

Completion is expected in the spring of 2020.

The former lodge has been vacant and controversial since the fire, with the city threatening several times to demolish it. A failed attempt to rehabilitate it took up several years and then there was no activity at the site for more years until Larry and Valecia Crisafulli bought it from the Cornerstone Society. Their work on it began in 2017.

At the Eagle Cotton Mill, also known as the Meese building, the tours were self-guided and confined to the first of the four floors.

The massive factory was built in 1884 at Vaughn Drive and St. Michael's Avenue, and has had a variety of industrial uses. Most recently, part of it was used for storage.

The property extends to the other side and goes into the Ohio River. When the mill was bustling, there was a large wharf where thousands of bales of cotton were unloaded, said Jan Vetrhus of the Cornerstone Society, who has researched the site.

Riverton LLC, whose partners are Ron Bateman of Madison, two of his former business partners in Alaska and hotel management company Dora Hospitality Group, plans to turn the cotton mill into a boutique hotel. A boutique hotel is usually defined as smaller than a traditional hotel.

The ground floor will be public space and include meeting rooms on the east end, a restaurant on the west end, a bar, offices and check-in desk, according to floor plans on display during the tour.

The top three floors will be guest rooms and amenities such as an exercise room.

Completion is expected in 2020.

Honoring Navy's Seabees in Madison

A monument to the contribution of Navy Seabees is being placed in veterans cemeteries throughout the nation, and it was Madison's turn Saturday. The program started in 2007. The Navy Seabee Veterans of America is behind the program, which pays tribute to the veterans of the Naval Construction Forces and the Civil Engineer Corps of the United States Navy, who have served war and peace. Members say the program will be going until they have a Seabee monument in every national cemetery. NSVA members traveled to Madison to join local residents in dedicating the monument. In the photo, Seabees (left to right) Charlie Burton, Richard Wooten, Dan Wells, Mike Freeman, Robert Sisson, Normand Dupuis, Eric Gentry, John Jones, Jeff Probst, Jack Richter, Bob Wooten, Stephanie Probst and Mayor Damon Welch pose with the monument in Madison. Bicentennial statue in place

Andrew Forrester, the community relations director for the City of Madison, displays the banner Friday at Bicentennial Park as the statue at the entrance to the park was formally dedicated during Fourth Friday. The Bicentennial Legacy Gift Committee, the Jefferson County Public Library and the Madison Area Arts Alliance worked to arrange for a piece of art that was commissioned 10 years after the city celebrated its bicentennial. Meant to look like the smokestack of a steamboat, the work by artist Mike Major of Urbana, Ohio, is a ceramic tower with a 3-D mural depicting things representing Madison. The railroad, bank, library and a hydroplane are some of the many things depicted in the mural on the smokestack. Bronze statues of two children and a pig sit at one end of a bench with resting space for visitors as well. (Courier staff photo by Trenton Scroggins)

Sweet contest; no winner

A good-natured controversy enriches a rivalry. The unusual happenstance that the American Queen and the American Duchess paddlewheel boats were both moored in Madison for the day Sunday gave rise to a pie-eating contest on the bank of the Ohio River. Employees of the two boats stuck their faces into pie shells filled with whipped cream in an event that dozens of people from the boats and from the public watched from the bank. Some watched from decks of the boats, where the Queen passengers were entertained by an onboard band. When the contesting teams lined up –some wearing ship-issued terrycloth bathrobes over their clothes—the Queen team had six members while the Duchess had only four. The Queen team "loaned" one of its members to the Duchess team. The loaned pie eater won the contest. So which boat's team won? To be determined the next time the two boats are in port together, a Queen officer said laughing as he watched from the sidewalk. (Courier staff photo by Peggy Vlerebome)

Graham's Kelly trucks to Columbia Cup win

Kelly out-runs Tate to victory as missed timing marks cost U-6 weekend sweep

By MARK CAMPBELL

mcampbell@madisoncourier.com

After coming up just one mph short in the season opener at Guntersville Lake in Alabama and missing his timing marks to blow any chance of a win at Madison, J. Michael Kelly turned a frustrating H1 Unlimited season one of celebration by winning Sunday's 54th annual HAPO Columbia Cup at Kennewick, Washington.

Kelly, driver of the U-12 Graham Trucking Unlimited hydroplane, had lost to series points leader Jimmy Shane and the U-6 HomeStreet/Miss Madison at both Guntersville and Madison and finished second to Shane in three of the four preliminaries ahead of Sunday's Columbia Cup.

But with the winner-take-all final on the line, the Bonney Lake, Washington, native secured lane two — inside of both Shane in lane four and defending Columbia Cup champion Andrew Tate in lane three — and nailed his start to seize the lead in the final heat on the first lap en route to the win. Kelley and Tate waged a deck-to-deck battle for four laps before the Graham Trucking pulled away from Tate's U-1 Delta/RealTrac and won the championship going away.

"We've been struggling," Kelly said after the win. "We have a good boat, but we were unable to get over that hump. We've just been throwing stuff at that boat all weekend. And whatever our guys have put in there it just gets faster. And I have to tell you, this is some of the most fun I've ever had racing this weekend."

Tate, winner of two prelims himself, was the only boat on the Columbia River within striking distance of Kelly by the beginning of the second lap. He chased Kelly hard for four laps to no avail before backing off on the final circuit as Kelly held an insurmountable advantage.

"It's really hard to pass anyone in unlimited hydroplane racing," Tate noted. "J. Michael just nailed that start."

Shane, who had won 11 straight heats prior to the final, missed his timing marks and was well behind the field at the start of the race. He was never within striking distance of Kelly or Tate and had to make a massive dash on the final lap to overtake Jeff Bernard and the U-1918 Oberto Super Salami/Miss Madison and Bert Henderson and the U-7 Boitano Homes to salvage a third place finish.

"I just got washed down in that first turn," Shane said of his five-lap struggle to finish third. "But I was back too far on the start. I thought maybe those guys were early to the start, but I was off on my timing starts. All weekend long I was hitting my timing marks. And then I'm off the final. And that first turn got really ugly."

Bernard secured the inside lane and arrived at the start with both Kelly and Tate but the Oberto, Miss Madison Racing's back-up hull until this weekend, was no match on speed for the two front-runners or its stablemate the Miss HomeStreet.

Kelly easily overlapped the Oberto and gained enough advantage on Tate to control the 2 1/2-mile Columbia River race course and dictate the action.

"I felt comfortable in lane two," Kelly said. "The start was close. I gave the gas an extra burp and it got me a little too close (to the starting line). But we got through that lane two clean."

With Kelly and Tate pulling away, Bernard fell back by a quarter of a lap and had to fend off Henderson in the Boitano Homes as Shane struggled along in fifth after the washdown. Brian Perkins and the U-99.9 PayneWest Insurance and Corey Peabody and the U-98 Graham Trucking American Dream waged their own battle for sixth place with Perkins edging Peabody, who started the race five seconds back from the trailer position.

Shane began closing ground on Bernard and Henderson on the final lap and passed Henderson on the back-

Bengals Green tears ligaments in ankle

By JOE KAY
AP Sports Writer

DAYTON, Ohio — Near the end of a festive afternoon commemorating the NFL's centennial season, the Cincinnati Bengals watched A.J. Green get carted off the field with an injury that left the receiver distraught.

"You never want to see that," quarterback Andy Dalton said. "It's unfortunate."

One practice into coach Zac Taylor's inaugural season, the last-place Bengals saw their most indispensable player crumple on the field. Green ran a deep sideline pattern during a 7-on-7 drill. Cornerback Dre Kirkpatrick bumped him as he knocked away the pass, and Green appeared to land awkwardly on the left foot.

He limped a few steps, crouched, limped a few more and then appeared to grab his mouth guard, flinging it to the ground. He sat down and trainers removed his left sock and examined the foot and ankle. Green was helped to the bench, which he angrily slammed with his hand. He buried his head in his arms as he was taken off the sideline on a cart for an exam.

"You don't want to assume anything, but I think that we'll be OK," Taylor said, adding, "I don't know; I shouldn't speculate on anything."

An MRI later confirmed that Green has torn ligaments in his left ankle, an injury that will likely to sideline him six to eight weeks. Green is now not expected to be ready for the regular-season opener Sept. 8 at Seattle.

The practice was held at Welcome Stadium, an hour north of Cincinnati, as part of the league's celebration of its 100th season. What's considered the first game in NFL history was played in Dayton in 1920. A main attraction for the crowd of approximately 7,500 was watching Dalton and Green connect again.

Dalton missed the last five games last season with a torn thumb ligament. Green missed more than half the season with an injured big toe on his right foot that required surgery. When players reported for the start of camp on Friday, Green was upbeat about his condition.

"My body feels great, my legs feel great," Green said Friday. "I started working out in February. I took a couple days off here and there, but it was just getting my toe right, getting my body back to where I need to be."

Green had been limited in offseason workouts as the Bengals went easy with their best receiver. Less than an hour into their first practice, he was gone again.

"I hadn't gotten a chance to see A.J. much," Taylor said. "I saw him one day in the spring time, and he was coming back off the toe injury. He was on pace to recover and I felt like he had a good summer. Sometimes like today, freak things happen, but we'll find out more about it a little bit later."

Fever rookie Wheeler All-Star Game MVP

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Indiana's Erica Wheeler hoped to make her All-Star debut an unforgettable one. She certainly did, walking away with the MVP award.

Wheeler, who was the first undrafted player to debut in the league since 2003 to earn an All-Star spot, scored 25 points and led Team Wilson to a 129-126 victory over Team Delle Donne on Saturday. The Indiana Fever guard got emotional when she accepted the MVP award tearing up.

"To me it was to make my mark and I think I did that," said Wheeler, who was one of six first-time All-Stars. "I'm a no-name and left today with a name that everyone can remember."

Her fellow All-Stars also were nearly as emotional, knowing what Wheeler went through to even make the league.

"I was crying my eyes out," team captain A'ja Wilson said. "It's real moments like that that people don't see. That's what it's all about."

Phoenix's Brittney Griner had an All-Star record three dunks, including an impressive two-handed jam where she hung on the rim over Aces star Liz Cambage. The Australian 6-foot-8 center had her own fun in the game, playing point guard. She waved off Aces teammate Kayla McBride when she tried to come over and take over the guard position.

The WNBA experimented with two new rules during the contest, having a 20-second shot clock and allowing both teams to sub in one player on offense in a hockey-like move once a quarter. The shot clock barely made a difference as neither team came close to seeing it reach single digits. Team Delle Donne was the first to use the hockey-like sub putting Courtney Vandersloot in late in the first quarter.

Team Wilson built a 14-point halftime lead behind Wheeler, who hit her first six shots — all 3-pointers.

DeWanna Bonner rallied Team Delle Donne in the third quarter, scoring 11 points in the period to get it within 10. The team cut it to three with 41.5 seconds left on Nneka Ogwumike's jumper. Wheeler answered though as the shot clock was winding down, hitting a 3-pointer from the top of the key. She did a dance on the other end to celebrate.

The 255 combined points are the most in All-Star history.

With the event in Las Vegas, it was a star-studded event. NBA player Chris Paul was sitting courtside as well as Kobe Bryant, who got a huge ovation from the crowd when he was introduced. Team Delle Donne member Jewell Loyd came over and gave Bryant's daughter a hug. Loyd and Bryant go back a long way.

UP NEXT

The WNBA regular season resumes Tuesday. With next year being an Olympic year it's unlikely there will be an All-Star Game as the league tends to take a month off in July for the Olympics.

Colts rookie defends sexual assault allegations

By MICHAEL MAROT
AP Sports Writer

WESTFIELD — Indianapolis Colts linebacker Bobby Okereke defended himself Saturday against sexual assault accusations from 2015, calling the allegations "untrue."

His name was publicly connected to the case for the first time last month, but Okereke made no public statements until after the Colts completed their first training camp practice in full pads Saturday.

"Those were untrue allegations, I willingly complied with the school investigation and was found not responsible," he said. "I informed the team about it during the pre-draft process and right now I'm just focused on making this team, helping this team out any way I can, and I'm moving forward."

Okereke was not punished by Stanford after a university board failed to reach the required 4-1 or 5-0 vote to hold him accountable. Criminal charges were not filed, either.

The New York Times initially reported in December 2016, without naming the parties involved, the board twice voted 3-2 in favor of the accuser before turning down a third request for a hearing. In June, The Fountain Hopper, an independent student-run website at Stanford, published details of the allegations and named Okereke as the accused football player.

It didn't come as a surprise to the Colts.

Just hours after Okereke's name surfaced publicly, general manager Chris Ballard told local reporters on a conference call that Okereke notified the team about the allegations during a January interview at the Senior Bowl. Ballard said team officials then took an exhaustive look into Okereke's background, contacting school officials and reaching out to others close to Okereke. Ballard said he also told team owner Jim Irsay of the accusations before taking Okereke in the third round of April's draft, No. 89 overall.

But Ballard acknowledged nobody spoke to the accuser or her attorney and that it was a "very sensitive subject."

"When we looked at it and talked to him, it was an incident from four years ago. He was never charged with a crime, he was never disciplined by the university," Ballard said. "He was a team captain, up for the Lott IMPACT award, he graduated with a degree in management and engineering and he's working on a master's. From everything we gathered, we felt it was appropriate to take him."

stretch and overtook Bernard by only a few feet at the finish for third.

Jamie Nilsen was standing by in the U-11 J&D's Reliable Tools as the alternate boat but with all seven boats answering the start, the team was forced to put its boat back on the trailer and miss the final in Nilsen's first race since replacing Tom Thompson in the U-11.

Both the U-3 Griggs Ace Hardware and U-444 Bucket List Racing experienced mechanical failures during Sunday's prelims and withdrew from the race. The Bucket List, driven by Dustin Echols, went to the sideline with gearbox problems while the piston-powered Griggs, driven by Jimmy King, broke a blade off its propeller in Heat 3B with the vibration shearing the propeller shaft and damaging the transom. Echols had posted a fourth and two fifths in preliminary heats prior to the boat breaking but King had scored two seconds before the prop failure.

The win was Kelly's ninth career victory and owner Rob Graham's second win.

In Saturday's prelims, both Shane and Tate were perfect on the day with two wins each with Shane battling through an equipment malfunction to win Heat 1A when a water line that supplies lubrication to the propeller shaft and other running hardware failed, causing the boat to take on some water late into that heat.

Shane said the extra weight slowed the boat and the loss of lubrication caused some bushings to fail and bent the propeller shaft.

"The crew we have is just amazing," Shane said. "It usually takes about two hours to make the repairs but they made them in just 30 minutes. In Heat 2A, the race boat was preforming just like it was before the damage. We were rocking and rolling and keeping the train rolling."

Shane also won Friday's four-boat, non-points Dash-For-Cash, charging from behind after coming to the starting line late and narrowly beating Henderson in the U-7 Biotano Homes by a foot in the five-lap exhibition while Kelly ran third and Peabody was fourth.

The Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison also topped all qualifiers on Friday with a lap at 163.573 mph that was more than 5 mph faster than runner-up Tate at 158.233 mph. Kelly qualified third at 155.881 mph followed Nilsen in the U-11 at 154.588 mph.

"The blue (Miss HomeStreet) boat is obviously really, really, fast, so everyone here is chasing them. They are the ones with the bull's-eye on their back even though we have the U-1 national champion number on our boat and are the defending Columbia Cup champion," Tate said after qualifying.

The pole was Shane's third of the season in as many races, giving him maximum points on the weekend up until the third place finish in the final heat.

Even with the Graham Trucking win and the third by Miss HomeStreet, Shane still expanded his national high points lead over Kelly by 330 points. The Miss HomeStreet now leads the series with 5,950 points to Graham Trucking's 4,539 with two races remaining. Henderson and the Boitano Homes is third with 3,765 points while Tate has made up ground to stand fourth with 3,152 in just two races.

Grand Prix World

In Sunday's Grand Prix World Supercharged final heat, Gregg Hopp won the race in the GP-15 Desert Food Mart/Overturf VW with Ed Preston and the GP-1 The Truss Company running second.

Hopp was driving the GP-15 after his normal boat, the GP-12 Miss DiJulio, caught fire on Saturday, forcing Hopp to jump into the Columbia River to escape the flames.

"I went from zero to hero. It's a fine line but today I am a hero," Hopp said of the comeback win.

Cloud Goes Airborne

In 5-liter action, the E-20 JJW Racing's Miss Silver Cloud Inn, driven by Travis Johnston, blew over and broke apart as it hit the Columbia River water during a heat race early Saturday morning. Johnston escaped serious injury but the boat was heavily damaged.

The H1 Unlimited Series now heads west across Washington state for the HomeStreet Bank Cup Aug. 2-4 on Lake Washington in Seattle.

Ulster Project students end 20th year in Madison

By TRENTON SCROGGINS
Special to the Courier

It was an early Thanksgiving meal and a poignant farewell Friday night as Madison's Ulster Project bid farewell to its visiting students from Northern Ireland.

The Ulster Project, now in its 20th year, said its goodbyes at First Christian Church in downtown Madison.

The evening began with hymns and personal testimonies, followed by a homemade Thanksgiving meal.

"What the Ulster Project does, it not only takes northern Irish teens and teaches them leadership and diversity, it also teaches the American hosts," said Madison area student Sean Mannix during the closing ceremony. "One of my favorite times of the month is time of discovery, which is what we like to call boundary-breaking. We teach each other about different problems in the world — sexism, sectarianism, etc. — and it teaches us about being a part of a solution rather than part of the problem....To make sure everybody has the opportunity to do what they want to do."

Naoise, a North Irish student, said the Ulster Project was an "awesome" experience.

"You've done a lot to push me out of my comfort zone," she said. "We also went canoeing which was quite scary."

The students arrived one month ago and have spent their time in Madison experiencing life here, while learning the importance of diversity and religious tolerance, said First Christian Church pastor Bill Johnson and Gary Burdette, one of the many parents involved in the project.

The students returned home over the weekend to enact what they've learned through the program in hopes of easing historic tensions in the region between Catholics and Protestants, loyalists to Great Britain and those opposed.

"It's long-held prejudices they are pressing up against," Johnson said. "They do a lot of work to prepare — (all the students, both Irish and American) — but (the Irish students) is more problematic based on religion."

William of Orange celebrations are what the program seeks to get students away from, said Laura Richmond, one of the project's Northern Irish coordinators.

Each year on July 12, observers take to the streets in parades throughout the province of Ulster, erecting towering bonfires and propaganda, all in recognition and celebration of the Glorious Revolution (1688) and the victory of Protestant King William of Orange over Catholic King James II at the Battle of the Boyne (1690).

The celebrations have often been in the midst of riots because of the implications of what they're celebrating a win and a defeat, Burdette and Johnson explained.

"It's hard to sit down and talk about religious issues," Burdette explained. "Because it's difficult to find a middle ground."

While in the states, the students — half of them Catholic and half of them Protestant — visited numerous churches of various denominatons, learning to actively engage in dialogue.

"It's just a long history," Richmond said.

During their time in the United States, the students visited Christ Episcopal, Even Song, the opening at St. Patrick's, Trinity United Methodist, North Madison Christian Church, and Prince of Peace.

Grandma feels used by son and in-law

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I'm a grandmother to five children. My son Brian and his wife, Amanda, have a 3-year-old and a 6-month-old together.

They live several states away, about a five-hour drive. I get to see them close to once a month, though, as they continually ask me to watch the kids while they go on vacation.

When their baby was only 3 months old, they took a trip to a resort in Mexico. Personally, I would never leave an infant, so I don't understand their desire to leave so often. Now they're going on a weeklong cruise, and I'll be baby-sitting again.

I don't mind watching the grandkids. I love them to the moon and back, and really, I appreciate how nice it is that I get to spend time with them, especially while they're still little and thrilled to see their grandma. But I think it's getting out of hand, and I feel as if my son and daughter-in-law think I don't have a life of my own. Am I being ridiculous? — Frustrated Grandma

Dear Frustrated: Here's a word that will change your life: "No." Try using it the next time your son and his wife are daydreaming of making a tropical getaway and leaving you in charge of their home life. Giving in to their requests all the time will leave you feeling taken advantage of and resentful. And that's a surefire way to damage your relationship with your son. Set boundaries.

Dear Annie: I am dating Jacob, a man I met online two years ago. Soon after we connected online, I broke it off with the guy I had been seeing and flew to meet Jacob in Utah, where he lives. We hit it off and decided to start a long-distance relationship. (I live on the East Coast.)

Things were great for the first few months. Then we started fighting almost every day, mostly about small stuff; he wasn't calling me enough and hadn't visited me (when I had visited him twice). We worked out a better routine, and he started visiting me every few months. But now I'm dealing with some other issues.

Jacob is Mormon. (I'm not religious.) He isn't fully committed to his faith anymore, but he still goes to church every week and has a lot of friends from that community. One of these friends is a woman who is about his age (he's 40) and has taken to sending me threatening Facebook messages about how I am "bad" and Jacob is a "good man" who deserves "a nice Mormon girl." She makes me feel like a terrible person, and I've never even met this lady!

I brought this up with Jacob, but he continues to act as if everything is fine when he sees this woman in group settings. He said he doesn't want to confront her, because they have so many friends in common. I wish he would tell her to stop. He just laughs it off and says, "That's just how Mary is. Don't worry about her." Well, I do worry! — Secular Girlfriend

Dear Secular: Mormon or not, Jacob should not be allowing anyone to harass you in any way. If he is allowing this to go on from across the country, I shudder to think what he would tolerate if you lived in the same city. It sounds as if he either does not have much of a backbone to stick up for you or he does not care enough to. Move on and try to find a new boyfriend.

THE RARE SIGNAL IS RARELY THE FIRST

Edna Ferber, whose novel "Cimarron" was turned into a movie that won the best picture Oscar in 1931, said, "Writers should be read but not seen. Rarely are they a winsome sight."

Bridge defense signals should be seen and read. All pairs would benefit from discussing this important part of the game. Remember, you defend on half of the deals.

How should East-West play to defeat four spades after West leads the heart ace?

In the auction, South jumped to four spades because his hand had only four-and-a-half losers: none in spades because you deduct one for a 10-card or better fit, one in hearts, two-and-a-half in diamonds, and one in clubs. (Note that if South had rebid three spades, it would have been competitive with no interest in game. To invite game, South would have had to double because there wasn't a game-try bid available.)

You know all about the signal hierarchy: first, attitude; second, count; third, suit-preference. Here, East's attitude is known as soon as the dummy is tabled. Also, continuing hearts at trick two cannot be right. Does count matter? No, and anyway, because West has six hearts, he will know it immediately. So, East should make a rarely seen trick-one suit-preference signal. He chooses between the other two side suits. Since he prefers West to shift to diamonds, which rank higher than clubs, he should signal with the heart jack.

Now West leads his low diamond, and three tricks in that suit result in down one.
